

The Dolphin Ring

A Division of the nonprofit Champions for Humanity, The Dolphin Ring is an Internet TV show under development.

The purpose is moving large managerial and financial resources for contributing to the wellbeing and healthy evolution of society and the planet.

It will have three main components:

- 1) Council of Elders - world-class business and financial leaders overseeing the programs they volunteer to adopt
- 2) Expert Advisory Panel - economists, sociologists, environmentalists, scientists, etc, advising on which proposed projects are most viable for having a positive impact
- 3) The Public - submitting ideas for projects, and voting on the projects they believe have the most merit

Some projects The Dolphin Ring helps to facilitate will be funded by philanthropic donation, while others will be for-profit entities funded by socially conscious or “impact” investors.

To the extent feasible, any money that might be made by any for-profit entity that might benefit from the nonprofit’s efforts will implement a cap on the ROI, with the rest going to charity.

Why it's called The Dolphin Ring:

1. Dolphins are infinitely more intelligent than sharks.
2. Dolphins will usually kick a shark's ass in battle – mainly because dolphins work together in teams, while sharks are lone predators.
3. Dolphins often seem to demonstrate compassion for human beings.
